Turkic Converbs And Serialization: Syntax, Semantics, Grammaticalization

Acknowledgements.....	9
Glosses.....	11
Example notation.....	13
Preface.....	14
Introduction.....	20
1. p-converb – its definition and properties.....	20
2. Serialization.....	31
3. Syntactic status of the projection headed by p-converb.....	40
3.1. Problem of coordination and subordination.....	40
3.2. Availability of subordinate and coordinate interpretationsof converbs.....	42
3.3. Subordination, coordination and pragmatic constraints on the situations.....	43
3.4. Embedding and juxtaposition, same-subjects and differential subjects, PRO.....	46
3.5. Criteria for differentiation of adjunction and coordination.....	47
3.5.1. Morphological criteria.....	47
3.5.2. Extraposition.....	49
3.6. Results of test application.....	51
3.6.1. Morphological criteria.....	52
3.6.2. Extraposition.....	53
3.7. Strict and sloppy reading.....	54
3.8. Conclusion: the dual nature of Turkic converbs.....	55
I. SERIAL CONSTRUCTIONS: GRAMMATICAL AND DIRECTIONAL FUNCTIONS... 56
1. Lexical and grammatical meaning of Turkic serializers.....	56
2. Sources of language data and principles of research.....	57
3. Verbs of different semantic classes as auxiliaries.....	59
3.1. Verbs of position and non-directional motion.....	59
3.2. Verbs of change of possession.....	65
3.3. Verbs of change of position of the patient.....	68
3.4. Verbs of directed motion.....	75
3.5. Perception verbs.....	85
3.6. Copula verbs.....	89
4. Conclusions: lexical and grammatical semantics of serializers.....	92
II. GRAMMATICALIZATION AND RESTRUCTURING.....	95
1. Turkic constructions with auxiliaries.....	95
2. Constraints on lexical and serial verb combinations.....	96
2.1. Possible approaches to the analysis of SVC.....	96
2.2. SVC and compositionality of syntactic clause structure.....	100
2.3. vP.....	105
3. The structure of SVC.....	109
3.1. Compatibility with the negation marker.....	109
3.1.1. The distribution of the negation marker.....	109
3.1.2. Interpretation of the negation marker on the lexical and auxiliary verbs.....	111
3.1.3. Position marker of negation in the SVCstructure.....	113
3.2. Markers of actant derivation and SVC.....	117
3.2.1. Passivization.....	117
3.2.1.1. Types of passive values.....	117
3.2.1.2. Location of passive marker in SVC.....	121
3.2.1.3. Expressing passive semantics in SVC.....	122
3.2.1.4. Anticausative passive and its compatibility with verbs of different argument structure in SVC.....	125

3.2.1.5. Compatibility of anticausative passive with different auxiliaries.....	128
3.2.1.6. Impersonal anticausative passive.....	132
3.2.1.7. The scope of the passive marker.....	135
3.2.1.8. The structure of passive and anticausative clauses.....	138
3.2.1.9. Position of “true passives” in the SVC structure.....	143
3.2.1.10. Position of anticausatives in the SVC structure.....	148
3.2.2. Causativization.....	153
3.2.2.1. Distribution of the causative marker.....	153
3.2.2.2. Case marking of participants.....	156
3.2.2.3. Duplicate causative marking and dual causation.....	157
3.2.2.4. Interpretation of causatives.....	160
3.2.2.5. Structure of causatives.....	166
3.2.2.6. Position of the causative marker in SVC.....	171
4. Conclusions: SVC and partial grammaticalization.....	175
III. COMPLEX VERBS OF MANNER AND RESULT.....	178
1. Complex verbs of manner: examples of the use of.....	178
2. Semantic properties of manner SVs.....	180
3. Possible analysis of manner SVs.....	181
3.1. Lexical approach.....	181
3.2. Auxiliary verbs.....	182
3.3. Verbs of result and manner: the structure of complement-dependent.....	184
3.4. Coordination.....	185
3.5. Manner-to-result adjunction.....	186
3.6. SVs of manner – a definition.....	187
4. Properties of manner SVs.....	188
4.1. Participant identity and the claim of same event interpretation.....	188
4.2. Fixed order “manner– result”.....	190
4.3. Coordination and cross-categorial morphology.....	191
4.4. Coordination of projections or heads?.....	197
4.5. Passivization.....	201
4.6. Manner SV properties: results.....	202
5. Verbs of result and manner in light of the theory of lexical decomposition.....	203
5.1. The dichotomy of manner vs. result / directional movement in the theoretical literature.....	204
5.2. Verbs of manner and result with the circumstances of duration.....	208
5.3. Semantic properties of verbs of manner and result.....	209
6. Structure of verbal projections with SV.....	218
6.1. The same event, identity of participants and the situation time.....	222
6.2. Fixed verb order.....	226
6.3. Possibility of the unmarked accusative in manner SVs.....	229
6.4. Passivization and the differences in the structure of SV and the other coordinate VPs.....	232
6.5. Syntactic structure of complex verb: analysis and some problems.....	326
6.6. SV as a serial construction.....	241
7. Conclusions: complex verbs and the typology of serial constructions.....	245
Conclusion.....	249
